SHOULD HOLD PHILIPPINES BIDDING FOR THE TRUSTS WANT TO JOIN UNCLE SAM

Any Other Course Would Subject Us to Uni- Delaware's Recent Legislation Designed to Mr. Mondesire Says This is the Sentiment in versal Contempt.

and Obligations of the United States.

Attorney General Griggs dictated the fol-owing statement regarding his views on he duty of the United States toward the hilippine Islands: "The United States stands bound to al the other countries as the responsible sovereign of the Philippine Islands. It cannot, consistently with its international obligations or its own self-respect, assume any other attitude. Its title to the islands and to the sovereignty thereof is regular, valid and unimpeachable. To attempt to shift international responsibility to any ill-formed or partially formed insurgent government would be to shirk a responsibility solemnly assumed by this country, and would subject the United States not only to the ridcule, but to the just contempt of all na

No Right to Self-Government. "The theory that there can exist in any ndefinite body of people the right to substitute their own will or self-constituted form of government for the regular constituted sovereignty of any particular territory is contrary to reason and to all international practices. The rightful soversignty of those islands at the present time is indisputably in the United States. Any insurrection against its authority in the though it arose in Porto Rico-and the United States is justified in putting it down by force.

"The sovereignty of Spain was never transferred in any manner which any other nation has recognized as valid to the in-surgents, but was by the treaty of Paris transferred to the United States by solemn onvention, which convention was ratified y the Senate of the United States, and that transfer is universally recognized by all the nations of the world.

"There is one consideration respecting the Inited States and the Philippine Islands that ought to be clearly understood by those who approve or those who disapprove the administration's course. That is, the question of sovereignty, as that term is used and understood in the technical and international sense. The sovereignty of a country or territory carnot rest in more than one nation or body. It cannot, at the same time, rest in Spain and in the insurgent forces claiming to maintain a govern-ment in the same territory. "It is admitted that in this international sense Spain has for more than 300 years exercised all the rights and powers of a sovereign over the Fhilippine Islands. Spain was responsible not only for the internal control and government of the islands, but likewise was responsible to the other rations of the surface and matters of other nations of the earth for all matters of an international character relating to those islands or to their people.

Our Policy Not Fixed. "This does not imply, however, that the future policy of the United States toward those islands is fixed. Whatever the United States shall hereafter do by way of granting to the people either independence or local self-government will be a matter of discretion to be determined by right and justice and expediency. These who criticize r oppose the administration in its efforts to maintain the authority of the United States in the Philippines might just as well oppose its efforts to maintain law and order in Porto Rico or Alaska, or to put down insur-rection occurring within those territories. "The question is not one of party politics but simply of national duty, and ought to be approached and considered by our citizens from their sense of dury to this country. I appreciate the fact that the subject has been largely considered in this aspect. It is very gratifying that this view has been for their ability to discriminate between the demands of party politics and national duty. It is not, as I said before, a politica!, but a national question, and cannot be monopolized by either party."

Attorney General Griggs on the Duty Entering Into Competition With New He Recounts the Causes Which Have Jersey-Claimed Advantages of the New Law.

The state of Delaware has entered in competition with New Jersey as a bidder for the trusts. New Jersey a few years ago adopted laws particularly favorable for the incorporation of trusts, and as a result secured fees aggregating an immense sum from trusts taking advantage of the favorable opportunities offered. Delaware became covetous of the good fortune of its neighbor, and lately proceeded to frame a law which it was calculated would attract some of the trusts into its limits. This law gave rise to the formation of a corporation trust company of Delaware for the purpose of facilitating incorporation in that state. Features of the New Legislation. In its circular soliciting business this company states: "The state of Delaware has just adopted the most favorable of existing general corporation laws-one marking a forward step in the evolution of the corporation.

"It does not encourage reckless incorporation nor permit the existence of wildcat companies, but it furnishes at least ex-pense ample rights to stockholders and reduces restrictions upon corporate action to The enactment is not the result (as is the case in most other states) of hesitating, halting, enacting, amending and repealing, but is a logical and systematic measure framed by a committee of able lawyers ap-pointed by the legislature to examine the statutes of the various states and to prepare a bill which should embody the and eliminate the bad points of existing "The law is based broadly upon that of the state of New Jersey, and embraces all of the beneficial provisions and safeguards of the beneficial provisions and safeguards found in the laws of that state. It has, however, in many respects advanced far beyond New Jersey, and makes Delaware a much more attractive home for a business corporation. In the following salient provisions the Delaware and New Jersey laws are substantially adaptical namely:

IN SMALL OCEAN-BOUND CRAFT.

Captain William A. Andrews, known as the lone navigator, left Atlantic City yesterday afternoon in a little craft, named The Doree, which is barely twelve feet in length, to attempt to cross the Atlantic ocean. He took an eastern course and headed direct for the Azore Islands, where he expects to stop for a few days to provision his larder.

This makes the fifth attempt of the captain to cross the ocean in similar small craft, three of which he claims were succraft, three of which he claims were suc-cessful. The boat he is using this time is twelve feet in length, five feet in width and twenty-two inches in depth. It has been painted black, for the purpose, the captain states, of not attracting the attention of whales and sharks, as he claims to have had considerable trouble with these mon-stares during his former trips.

Howard Blackburn of Gloucester, Mass., also set sail alone yesterday afternoon in his little sloop-rigged four-ton boat, the Great Western, to cross the Atlantic. Blackburn followed a seafaring life on Gloucester fishing vessels for many years, and in January, 1883, was cast away in his dory on the Grand Banks, with one companion for five days without food or water. His companion died, but Blackburn was rescued, although he lost his fingers and toes and was otherwise crippled as the result of his terrible experiences. toes and was otherwise crippied as the result of his terrible experiences.

The Great Western is stocked with provisions for ninety days, and Gloucester, England, is the point where Blackburn ex-

This has naturally bred the greatest dissatisfaction, and all classes of the community are united in urging the home government to open negotiations with the United States looking to an exchange of these islands for territory recently acquired in the orient. The movement in favor of union with the United States may be said to have set in eighteen years ago. About that time
